EMPOWERING GROWTH. ELEVATING SUCCESS

YOUR RESULTS SUMMARY

What's Keeping You Stuck?

Twelve statements, four areas: how much you're carrying, where your time goes, how decisions get made, and what it's costing you. Your score and your biggest area are in the email that came with this page.

12–27

Holding it. Mostly.

You're managing, but some of what got you here won't survive things getting busier. Sort your wobbliest area now, while it's still a choice and not an emergency.

28–43

Carrying too much

Where most solopreneurs and small business founders live, and it's not a badge of honour. The business works because you absorb everything, and that has a ceiling. Your scores show where the weight sits.

44–60

Running on empty

Not a personal failing. It's what happens when one person does the work of five with the systems of none. The fix isn't working harder. It's one deliberate look at the whole thing.

What to do about your biggest area

How much you're carrying

Name the three things only you can do. Everything else is a candidate for a system, a template or someone else's hands.

Pick one recurring task this week and turn it into a written checklist, so it stops living in your head.

Where your time goes

Track one honest week. Not to judge it, to see it. You can't fix a leak you haven't found.

Book the growth work into the diary like a client meeting. It is one. You're the client.

How decisions get made

Pick one stalled decision and set a date for it. Choose in advance what you'll go with if you haven't made up your mind by then. A good-enough answer now usually beats a perfect one that never arrives.

One priority per week. Not three. One.

What it's costing you

Put a hard stop in the diary at least twice a week, and keep it the way you'd keep a client appointment.

If it's felt this hard for months, that's information, not weakness. Get an outside pair of eyes on it.
